

David R. Pensgard
201 S. 29th St.
Purcellville, VA 20132
David@Pensgard.com
540/751-9242

14 January 2010

To Whom It May Concern,
Regarding the Character of Mark Robertson:

It is my pleasure to recommend Mark Robertson. I have known Mark and his family for twenty-six years. In that time, he has proven himself to be a valuable and loyal friend to me and my wife.

Mark is certainly cut out to work in the construction industry. Through his educational and employment choices, he has nurtured and expanded his own ability to deal with every aspect of building. I have always known him to be exceptionally gifted in thinking like a builder. I have seen his work and truly admire his natural gift for spatial reasoning.

Mark is trustworthy and competent. I believe that Mark would be a valuable member to any team effort. Moreover, I think he also has a heightened sense of personal responsibility and a strong work ethic. As a result, he would also work well independently.

Mark is also a good judge of character and is able to connect with people of varying personalities. People tend to think of Mark as being quite knowledgeable and competent and I have seen him generate goodwill and respect among both friends and peers. Thus, I think he makes an excellent manager as well.

Mark has recently married. He and his wife, Jamie, have just had their first child, a baby boy. I think Mark makes a great husband and father. I have seen the strong connections that he has made with his family of origin, and I think he will find it natural and fulfilling to form strong family bonds in his new household. If family is important to you, then you will agree that those who responsibly support families are people of good moral character. Moreover, I believe that Mark exceeds this standard.

This, of course, leads to the subject of religion and values. Mark is a committed Christian. I have engaged with him in theological discussions on many occasions and find him to be thoughtful, faithful, and discerning. Not only is he a member and regular attendee of a good Church in Centralia, Missouri, but he also brings his faith home with him. I know that he leads his wife through a daily time of prayer and Bible study.

Mark is an intelligent, capable, dedicated, and personable man. He would be an asset to any company and any project. I am happy to give him my full and unmitigated endorsement.

Sincerely,

David R. Pensgard
Adjunct Professor of Philosophy and Theology
Liberty University Online